1 — BEFORE YOU CHOOSE A DESIGN

☐ Read your lease's sign criteria. Many Houston retail centers and office parks set their own rules for letter style, color, size, and mounting. A sign can be city-legal and still get rejected by your landlord.

☐ Get your landlord's written approval of the concept before anything is fabricated.

2 — CONFIRM WHAT NEEDS A PERMIT

---

☐ Assume permanent exterior signs need a permit — channel letters, monument signs, pylon signs, and most illuminated signage do. Temporary banners may have separate, time-limited rules. Small window graphics and some interior signs often don't — confirm before you order.

☐ Verify before fabrication, not after. The expensive mistake is ordering first and dealing with approvals later.

3 — WHAT THE REVIEW CHECKS

- Size and height relative to your building frontage and the road
- Illumination — whether and how the sign is lit
- Placement and setback from property lines and right-of-way
- Structural and electrical safety, especially for larger or lit signs

4 — WHAT YOU'LL NEED TO SUBMIT

☐ A permit-ready drawing documenting dimensions, materials, and mounting method.

☐ Site details — your address, building frontage, and where on the building or lot the sign goes.

☐ Electrical details for illuminated signs (UL-certified components).

☐ Landlord sign criteria approval, where the property has one.

5 — THE RIGHT ORDER OF OPERATIONS

- 1. Confirm your lease sign criteria before choosing a design.
- 2. Check city size, height, and illumination limits for your address.

- 3. Get a permit-ready drawing.
- 4. Submit and get approval before fabrication starts.
- 5. Build, install, and pass inspection the first time.

Or skip the paperwork entirely. Houston Sign Crafters reviews your lease criteria, confirms city code, pulls the permit, and only then builds and installs — UL-certified, backed by a 5-year warranty.
